

Breach Candy Hospital Trust

5th Annual CME - Audits in Infection Prevention & Control

19th & 20th January 2018

Audits are an integral part of any quality improvement process. Infection prevention & control is an essential component of the quality improvement process of every Healthcare Organization. Healthcare workers do not receive any formal training in understanding, conducting and analysing audit processes, within their academic training programmes (medical or nursing). This CME serves to bridge this gap.

This CME is being organized by the Infection Control Team at Breach Candy Hospital Trust, Mumbai consecutively for the last five years. As has been our practice, we intend to keep the sessions interactive so that participants can gain from the expertise of the speakers and can also discuss some problems faced by them.

Objective: To understand the role of audits in improvising infection control practices in healthcare settings especially in high risk areas.

Target audience: Healthcare workers including physicians, microbiologists, nurses, other allied staff with interest in infection prevention & control will be preferred. Post graduate students and those who have recently completed PG may also attend.
